▼ Founding of the Company

Opened in 1996 as an import store for American comics and figures with the company name derived from the movie "Terminator", obtaining personal consent from director James Cameron. Planned and manufactured toys and goods, developed the publisher brand "Architect" and the brand "Solid Games" for board and card games. Also developing accessories, apparel, and miscellaneous goods under the brand licenses "Bond Girl" and "Area 51".

Architect

Planning, publishing, and cataloging of science fiction, fantasy, character design, and fine art. Also producing large size books including "Metropolis" and "King Kong" screen books for libraries.

ML-G

Development and production of "BG Spy Gear", a multi-tool based on the concept of Bond Girl's secret spy tools. Also developing the "YoutuBar", a shooting auxiliary device for media contributors and influencers.

Solid Games

Following the release of the monopoly-like survival board game "SAMEPOLY", card games such as "Sengoku Railway", "Kokumichi Comike" and "Armor God" are currently in development.
